

פְּרַשְׁת לֶךְ לְךָ: הַתְּחִלּוֹת הַדָּשׁוֹת

Hi Everyone!

There's something you should know about turtles – we don't like changes! For example, I'd never change my house...well, even if I wanted to I couldn't... Also, I always eat the same thing – lettuce and carrots. They're so delicious, so why change the menu?! That's the way I am – I like things to stay exactly as they are. So I really admire Abraham. When God told him to leave his homeland, he went without hesitating. I guess he completely trusted God and wanted to follow God's command. I think he was very brave. Although maybe Abraham actually liked changes – I guess some animals or people do. For example, my sister Shiri loves changes. She finds them interesting and exciting.

Not me! If I was told to leave everything I knew, first off, I'd crawl inside my shell and fall asleep...then I'd slowly stick my head out and take a peek, just to make sure that my lettuce hadn't turned into a pumpkin and that my friend Zuzu hadn't turned into an elephant. Then I'd decide that it was a very bad idea to leave and that the sensible thing would be to simply stay put.

What about you?

Do you like changes in your lives?
